Dedication

To dedicate this book to one person would be a betrayal.

To those who helped me to weather the storm, I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

To those of you who created it, I thank you from the heart of my bottom.

Acknowledgements

To my wife, Trudy: Thank you for sitting through the clenched teeth, the quiet moods, and the tears, and for mopping my brow during the nightmares and pretending it didn't hurt you.

To my son, Tyler: Thank you for your support and for understanding that Dads are not always invincible.

Evelyne: Thank you for not just speaking my words.

John MR: Thank you for your energy, your humor, and your strength. Shukufuku-shin.

Gordon & Denise: Thank you for going the extra mile.

To all my friends I am not naming: You all know who you are, and I am worried I might miss one out. Your support was what kept me going and still does to this day.

To the doubters and those who went out of their way to make things worse: If even once it pricks your conscience, that's enough for me.

CHAPTER ONE

The Whys and Wherefores

Knowing where to begin is easier said than done. Starting from the beginning is all very well, but where is the beginning? To my way of thinking, the beginnings can be endless, depending on your viewpoint of the subject, but I digress. My thoughts and words are not here to change your (the reader's) life, but are for me a way to exorcise my demons. I am attempting to put down the words that I haven't been able to speak. I desperately want to be able to move on, to come to terms with a life I never thought I would experience firsthand.

I still, to this day, have not come to remember, apart from in the nightmares, every detail of what went on. And some of what I do remember, I cannot put into words. How do you word that kind of "despair" or "fear" so that someone will understand exactly what you went through?

I don't want just to put down inane facts. I want to try and get over my thoughts and emotions, as well as my thought processes, chronologically. Writing this way, I think you will understand a bit about the way I dealt with things and the way I controlled my emotions, as they all have a bearing on each other. As you read, I want you to try to "feel" too. In the end, this whole story is just about feelings. I want you to feel my confused loyalty for two children I grew to love as my own, as well as the same two children I am now supposed to despise.

Why am I writing this? I am writing this primarily because I have to, for my own benefit. But I am also writing this because I want others to know what it is like to have a dream destroyed – maybe not just a dream, but your every wish destroyed, everything you ever did or questioned, every good you put out into the world turned around for bad.

The story may seem a little one-sided, as it is heading toward a goal of writing my thoughts on a particular incident, but that's because it isn't a history of us. I will, however, give you an outline of our lives and the reasons behind our actions to give you some kind of framework.
